Driving in Toronto all the rage

Your Ride: Day 4.
Some days it seems like everyone is on the road — literally everyone

EDWARD KEENAN
torontoletters@metronews.ca

When he was asked what he hates about Toronto during a radio-station debate this week, mayoral candidate John Tory said "traffic."

I'm not sure whether the sound of horns blaring across the city just then came from listeners signalling agreement or whether it was just the normal howl of frustration. But it's a fair guess many of us agree: We could change our civic motto to We Be Jammin' and everyone would know what it meant.

If you're not sitting in a traffic jam in this town, you're usually walking beside one or waiting for someone who's stuck in one.

Sadly, no mayoral candidate will bring help in time for this weekend. Most of the downtown core will be closed Sunday for a marathon, while the Yonge subway closure between Bloor and Eglinton will force more travellers into cars.

Most of the proposed solutions to road congestion from candidates are really long-term: building transit to give people options besides driving. Looking even further ahead, a lot of research has convinced me that tolls or congestion charges are the only thing that will work, but long-shot candidate Ari Goldkind is the only Toronto politician proposing those.

Let's forget the long road ahead: The guy riding his horn behind me tells me we need something to change — now.

All the candidates have quicker road proposals to make traffic flow better, preventing the usually unpredictable jam-ups that have now become a regular feature of driving:

- All three major candidates would carry on with plans to co-ordinate traffic signals better, a process already underway.
- Both Olivia Chow and Tory suggest enforcing existing laws against idling or parking in curb lanes for deliveries.
- Both Chow and Tory emphasize better construction- and road-closure planning to prevent multiple disruptions on the same days. Chow says she'd hire a full-time staffer to manage the file, while Tory says he'd personally chair the committee tasked with scheduling.
- Chow has said specifically she'd charge developers by the week for closing road lanes for their construction work, rather than a flat fee — a promising idea. Tory also promises to look into these fees to discourage lengthy lane closures.

There's a lot of overlap there, so for many voters the choice on these questions might boil down to who they trust to manage things.

Though it's not in his platform, this week Doug Ford pledged to study widening the lanes on the Don Valley Parkway. It sounds like an OK idea, but it would be expensive, and many experts say that within a few years, traffic would slow to about the same levels.

The truth is, none of these will fix congestion, but all of these ideas will help a bit. For a while. And they seem possible to implement quickly.

When it comes to Toronto traffic, anything that can arrive quickly seems like a miracle.

Westbound traffic on the Gardiner Expressway at Spadina Avenue drags at a snail's pace during a typical evening rush hour in Toronto. We could change our civic motto to We Be Jammin' and everyone would know what it meant, says Edward Keenan. TONY BOCK/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Mount Sinai staff caught snooping in Ford's records

Privacy breach. Hospital official confirms mayor's info was 'inappropriately accessed' by staff and 'appropriate action' was taken after investigation

JESSICA SMITH CROSS

Two Mount Sinai staff members snooped into Mayor Rob Ford's health record, the hospital has confirmed in an email to Metro.

"Two Mount Sinai staff members who are not part of the patient's care team have inappropriately accessed (Ford's) health record," Sally Szuster, senior manager of communications and public affairs at Mount Sinai, told Metro Thursday afternoon. "We immediately investigated and appropriate action has been taken, as per our strict code of conduct and privacy policies. As per legislative requirements, the patient was notified of the situation.

"We sincerely regret that these privacy breaches occurred. Privacy for all of our patients is paramount and we will continue to be diligent in upholding our privacy policies and practices," the email continued.

The hospital became aware of the privacy breach because it monitors the privacy of health records with "a robust system of safeguards and auditing procedures designed to ensure compliance to our security and privacy policies," Szuster said in the email.

Metro had contacted the hospital to confirm or deny posts on a Reddit sub-forum, which said nurses had been fired for checking the mayor's health records. Szuster would not confirm if the employees in question were, in fact, nurses, nor whether they were fired. She didn't confirm if the health record was copied, stolen, or simply viewed by the staff members.

Acting privacy commissioner Brian Beamish said the attorney general can prosecute people who use health records in contravention of the province's privacy law.

"A person who is guilty of an offence under this provision is liable, on conviction, if the person is an individual, to a fine of not more than $50,000 and, if an organization, a fine of not more than $250,000," he said in a statement. "Following an investigation, our office would have the option of referring a particular case or individual to the attorney general in order for that office to consider prosecution. Similarly, a hospital could make such a reference on its own behalf."

Ford is receiving treatment for liposarcoma, a form of cancer. He has been in and out of Mount Sinai receiving chemotherapy since his diagnosis in September.

Past problems

Breaches found 'by sheer luck'

Employees have been fired for breaching patient privacy in the past. Two Rouge Valley Hospital employees were fired earlier this year after it was discovered that confidential information about new mothers was given to private companies selling RESPs.

After the Rouge Valley Hospital privacy breaches came to light, the now-former Ontario privacy commissioner Ann Cavoukian said she would investigate the issue of health record privacy and the systems that hospitals use to check for breaches. "In both occasions, the hospital learned of the breaches by accident. By sheer luck," Cavoukian told Torstar News Service at the time. "How many other instances may have occurred, or be occurring, that we haven't lucked into in terms of detecting it?

Woman's niqab challenge may axe federal policy

During citizenship ceremonies. Former immigration minister Jason Kenney introduced the ban in Dec. 2011

Lawyer Naseem Mithoowani CONTRIBUTED

A Mississauga woman has taken the federal government to court over a policy that forbids wearing the face-covering veil while taking the oath of citizenship, arguing the ban breaches her Charter rights and fails to accommodate her religious beliefs and dress code.

Banning the niqab from citizenship ceremonies is the result of former immigration minister Jason Kenney imposing his own ideology of "Canadian values" on the process, Zunera Ishaq's lawyer, Naseem Mithoowani, told federal court Justice Keith Boswell at a hearing in Toronto.

"The true motivation of the policy is to compel Muslim women to abandon, albeit briefly, their religious adherence," Mithoowani said.

"The failure to remove the veil is at the heart of this policy, more than being seen taking the oath ... This is about Kenney deciding that niqab does not fit into the mode of Canadian citizens."

It's the first such challenge against the niqab ban at citizenship ceremonies; if successful, it could strike down the policy.

In December 2011, Kenney brought in the ban in an operational manual — rather than new legislation — in a series of measurements meant to strengthen the integrity of Canadian citizenship that also included raising the pass mark for the citizenship test and stricter residency and language requirements.

"(The) cultural tradition ... reflects a certain view about women that we don't accept in Canada," Kenney, now Canada's employment minister, said then. "We want women to be full and equal members of Canadian society, and certainly when they're taking the citizenship oath, that's the right place to start."

Ishaq, who was not in court, started wearing the niqab at 15 and said it has become part of her identity.

Quoted

"She had a choice of becoming a citizen or adhering to her religion. Becoming a citizen is a privilege, not a right."

Government lawyer Negar Hashemi

In 2008, she was sponsored to Canada from Pakistan by her husband.

She put her citizenship ceremony on hold in January as a result of the ban.

Ishaq said she had no issue with removing her niqab in a private setting if it is "necessary" for security or identification purposes, but felt it's different "being seen" taking the citizenship oath in a room full of others.

Government lawyer Negar Hashemi said the case is about finding the "right balance" between respecting differences and maintaining Canadian core democratic values.

The niqab ban, she said, is part of a larger scheme to ensure everyone vows loyalty to Canada. Other non-veil-wearing candidates caught not doing so, such as elderly people with language difficulties, can also have their citizenship certificates withheld. "There is no hidden agenda in this case," she said.

Derek Kesek of Burlington is designing the world's first hemp plane. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

High on hemp: Plane to be grass, not fibreglass

Burlington's Derek Kesek plans to be flying high in the world's first hemp plane next year.

At first, people laughed when the former organic restaurant owner said he was going to build a plane made out of hemp.

"Can you smoke it, too?" they jibed.

"But, they're not laughing at me now," the environmental activist told Torstar News Service this week.

Last month his Waterloo-based company, Hempearth, signed a contract with a Florida-based plane manufacturer to build an aircraft made almost entirely out of hemp.

A member of the cannabis plant family, hemp is a tall, leafy plant with a strong fibrous stalk. It is used to make T-shirts, soap, rope, oil, food, construction materials and now, planes.

Quoted

"We are building this essentially from weeds from the garden."

Derek Kesek

Kesek believes his hemp plane could revolutionize the world — "just like Steve Jobs did with his phones."

Because hemp is a sustainable crop that needs no pesticides or herbicides to grow, the plane would have a carbon footprint significantly smaller than that of standard planes, he said.

"We are building this essentially from weeds from the garden. When nickel and other elements are taken, they can't be put back."

At least 75 per cent of Kesek's plane — including its wings, seats, pillows and outer shell — will be made from hemp, instead of fibreglass.

If the plane meets aviation regulations, it will — fittingly — run on hemp biofuel, Kesek said.

"Everybody said, 'You can't do that, you're not going to be able to do that.' I just said, 'Watch me,'" Kesek said.

Campaigning Rob Ford asked to leave polling station

Rob Ford was asked to leave Driftwood Community Centre after illegally campaigning during advanced polling on Thursday. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Rob Ford was asked to leave an advance polling station outside his own ward on Thursday after apparently campaigning illegally on the voting site.

Torstar News Service was given an account of the incident by a witness who asked to remain anonymous. The city confirmed most of that account.

Ford could not immediately be reached for comment.

In an email, the witness said Ford, who is running for a council seat in Ward 2 Etobicoke North, was inside Driftwood Community Centre near Jane Street and Driftwood Avenue around 3:30 p.m. while the advance poll was taking place.

A photo appears to show Ford inside the centre just outside the room where voting was taking place.

Quoted

"Staff at the voting location advised him that campaigning is not permitted anywhere within the designated voting place. Our understanding is that once he was advised of this, he left the voting location."

City spokeswoman Leisa Odlum in an email

The witness said Ford had to be escorted from the building by city security, where he "continued persuading members of the public to vote" as he lingered in the parking lot outside.

City spokeswoman Leisa Odlum confirmed Ford was at the community centre Thursday and was asked to leave, but said Ford left on his own and was not escorted from the polling station.

According to the rules

- Campaigning of any kind is not allowed at voting locations, as set out by Ontario's Municipal Elections Act.
- It prohibits campaigning inside the building and also on the property where the building is located.

"Staff at the voting location advised him that campaigning is not permitted anywhere within the designated voting place. Our understanding is that once he was advised of this, he left the voting location," she said in an email.

Odlum said Ford "was speaking with electors and having photos taken. Staff at the location advised him that it was not permitted anywhere within the designated voting location."

TTC CUSTOMER CHARTER UPDATE

ANDY BYFORD
CEO
TORONTO TRANSIT COMMISSION

Delivery of the TTC's 2014 Customer Charter commitments continues apace.

This quarter, we have made continued progress on delivery of our charter promises, including work to further improve the cleanliness of the subway, and to increase the quantity and quality of customer information. We have also recruited and deployed fare inspectors on our 501 Queen and 510 Spadina routes to ensure that everyone has a valid fare and to enable the Spadina route to fully convert to the all-door boarding, Proof-of-Payment system.

We opened the second platform at Union Station as promised, and we delivered on our commitment to commence the easier access project at Woodbine Station and to begin construction of a second exit at Wellesley Station.

While we fell just short of recruiting 20 additional route supervisors to improve bus reliability and punctuality, we will recruit the remaining six over the next few weeks.

It was pleasing to see the results of our first customer satisfaction survey, specifically for Wheel-Trans customers. This survey found that 85 per cent of respondents are satisfied with the service they receive.

It was pleasing to see the results of our first customer satisfaction survey, specifically for Wheel-Trans customers. This survey found that 85 per cent of respondents are satisfied with the service they receive and that 90 per cent are proud of the TTC.

In addition to working on delivery of our charter commitments, my team is focused on other major projects to improve the service we provide. We have changed the subway schedules to add two peak-hour trains on Lines 1 and 2, and we are working with our supplier, Bombardier, to roll out more of the new low-floor streetcars.

Finally, we are just one month away from the beginning of the progressive introduction of PRESTO, including its debut on the new streetcars. I know that, of all our many initiatives to modernize the TTC, the introduction of a smartcard will be one of the most transformative. I will continue to update you on its ongoing progress.

EMPLOYEE PROFILE

Name: Murray Hill Position: Manager, Construction & Events for Rail Transportation Years of Service: 30

I find myself fortunate to have only had one career since graduating from college in 1984. Hired as a bus operator, I've held a number of positions ranging from operator and front line Route Inspector up to my current role. The TTC has provided me with the opportunity to not only grow as an employee, but also as a person both on and off the job. The wealth of knowledge this organization has, and the quality of people it employees, speaks volumes to the success of the organization as a whole. I carry a lot of the same work qualities into my hobby, refereeing minor hockey in both the GTHL and OMHA.

POP ON THE 501 QUEEN & 510 SPADINA STREETCAR ROUTES

Proof-of-Payment (POP), now on the 501 Queen and 510 Spadina lines, creates a faster commute by allowing customers to board at any door, avoiding the long lines of customers waiting to enter at the front doors.

With POP, customers need only to carry proof of payment, such as a pass, transfer or receipt, to board using any door. The result is an improved customer experience, with less time servicing stops, and a shorter overall trip.

Regardless if you're traveling on a POP route, it's always best practice to get a transfer or receipt where you pay your fare.

That way, if you change your plans and decide to take a different route, you are prepared.

Customers travelling on the 501 Queen and 510 Spadina routes without POP risk a fine of up to $425. For more information on POP, visit ttc.ca.

WEEKEND LINE 1 CLOSURE – BLOOR TO EGLINTON

On Saturday, Oct.18 and Sunday, Oct. 19, Line 1 (Yonge-University) will be closed between Bloor and Eglinton stations for scheduled track upgrades. Davisville, St Clair and Rosedale stations will remain open for fare transactions and connecting surface routes. Summerhill Station will be closed. Frequent shuttle buses will operate on Yonge Street between Bloor and Eglinton stations, with Wheel-Trans available for customers requiring an accessible connection. To complete the work, closures are also scheduled for Nov. 1-2 and Nov. 8-9. Visit.ttc.ca for details.

DO YOU HAVE A QUESTION FOR THE TTC? SEND AN EMAIL TO ASKTTC@METRONEWS.CA

BATHURST AND WOLSELEY INTERSECTION TO CLOSE ON MONDAY

From Monday, Oct. 20 to Sunday, Nov. 2, the intersection of Bathurst and Wolseley will close for major road construction. No through traffic will be permitted on Bathurst Street between Willis and Robinson streets. This closure is required to upgrade and maintain the track infrastructure, watermain and adjacent road, and will result in more reliable service for many years to come. The 511 replacement bus will divert southbound via Bathurst, Dundas, Spadina, Richmond, Bathurst to route and northbound via Bathurst, Adelaide, Spadina, Dundas, Bathurst to route.

‘Batman’ marathons for the cause

Running for SickKids. Doctors at children’s hospital saved his life 30 years ago when his appendix suddenly ruptured

jessica.smithcross@metronews.ca

In a Q&A with Metro, a man who runs marathons dressed as Batman says he runs because it helps him believe in himself while raising money for a children’s hospital because doctors there once saved his life.

The runner known as JP Hernandez will be fundraising for SickKids Hospital through the Scotiabank Toronto Waterfront Marathon Charity Challenge when he runs this Sunday.

Why do you run?
I started to run because running allowed me to become a more committed person in many aspects of my life, and with more belief in myself in accomplishing things I never once thought I could do. Running freed me and changed my life for the better.

Why do you do it as Batman?
I chose Batman because, though he has no super powers, he is arguably the most human of all super heroes. He uses his will and intellect to fight crime. Along the same levels, I trained my body and mind to withstand the punishment that the body endures over the course of 42.2K, and I prepare my mind to be even tougher, mentally tougher, and that includes powering through and not “hit the wall.”

Why do you keep your real identity secret?
“Just like Batman said in Batman Begins, “It’s not who I am underneath, but what I do that defines me.” However, I make myself available on social media through Facebook (The Dark Knight Runner is my page) and Twitter (@rundarkknight).

Why is SickKids an important cause to you?
Over 30 years ago, the doctors at the Hospital for Sick Kids saved my life when my appendix suddenly ruptured. That was the closest I came to death.

What’s your marathon goal time?
This year, I hope to do better than my 5:16 time of last year; I hope to be at or below 4:45. However, it’s hard to not stop to high five kids or stop for photos with people. If it gives them something to smile, I’m more than happy to oblige.”

What is it like to run in that suit?
“It’s interesting. The suit is all running gear. The mask is rubber, as is the neck piece. It’s actually not that bad to run in, but it’s tough to hear people cheering me on along the route. As a hard-of-hearing person, it’s an even bigger challenge. That’s why I wave as often as I can, or do a thumbs-up!”

JP Hernandez runs as Batman in last year’s Scotiabank Toronto Waterfront Marathon. CONTRIBUTED

Culinary king. Alain Ducasse makes meal of Toronto

Alain Ducasse is a globe-trotting chef at the helm of a culinary empire with a record-setting 21 Michelin stars to his name and a reputation that is synonymous with haute cuisine.

Since touching down earlier this week, Ducasse, in Toronto for the very first time to announce a partnership between his culinary school and the George Brown Chef School, has been spirited through the city’s culinary landscape. He’s been eating his way through food from chefs of the old, established guard and the new, hip, young set.

Needless to say, he’s impressed. He is excited about the partnership between his school and George Brown, which will send 24 pastry students each year to study and work abroad.

Wait a second — is this new initiative just a good way to steal Canadian talent?

“J’espere,” he says. Translation: I hope so. And he seems genuine. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Maninho Costa leads his samba percussion group Batucada Carioca in a rehearsal on Thursday for Sunday's performance at the Great Hall as part of the Uma Nota Festival of Tropicana Expressions. LIA GRAINGER/FOR METRO

Brazilian rhythms put the samba in T.O.

Uma Nota. Fourth edition of the festival runs Thursday to Sunday at locations across the city

Maninho Costa stands in front of his musicians, arms raised like a conductor ready to cue the first notes of a symphony. Yet, clutched in his hand he holds not a baton but a long wooden drumstick. When that drumstick drops, the rhythms that burst from the drums, horns and guitar of his waiting 15-piece band are far from orchestral — they're undeniably funky.

Costa has been the man at the helm of the explosive Toronto samba percussion ensemble Batucada Carioca for the past decade. His beat-pounding collective will be headlining the fourth annual Uma Nota Festival of Tropical Expressions, which kicked off Thursday and runs until Sunday at locations across the city.

"I loved the Toronto music scene right away," says Costa, reminiscing about his arrival here from Rio de Janeiro in 2001. Costa came to play a single show, discovered a city with a burgeoning samba scene, and has been here ever since.

"Brazil is very rich in terms of rhythm, and that really captivates people around the world," says Costa. Batucada Carioca has members from Spain, Iran, Canada, the United States, Brazil, Bolivia and more. "Even if you don't understand the language, you can understand the feeling," says Costa.

Although many of the shows have Brazilian roots, festival director and lead programmer Alex Bordokas says it's about more than just one country.

"People have called Uma Nota Brazilian because we have a lot of Brazilian programming, but really it is because so much of Brazilian music carries the creativity, danceability and expressive nature that allies with our crowd of world citizens," says Bordokas. "People from everywhere enjoy Uma Nota events, because we bring good music and no pretensions. Whatever we do, we do it in a funky style."

Toronto dance company The Dance Migration will perform a choreographic sampling of the many dance forms that hail from Brazil on Friday night at the Fleck Theatre in Harbourfront Centre in their production Terra Brasil.

For those who'd rather do the dancing themselves, there will be shows on Friday and Saturday featuring world-renowned reggae, Latin and urban bands and DJs, including The Human Rights, DJs Rebel Up! from Brussels, Montreal's Poirier and Toronto's own DJ General Eclectic.

LIA GRAINGER/FOR METRO

All-day fair

Batucada Carioca play Sunday as part of an all-day Community Cultural Fair at the Great Hall on Queen West.

- The fair will emulate a "Feijoada" party typically held by samba schools in Brazil to celebrate the community. There will be food, drinks, an artists' market and kids' activities.
- The day will also provide a chance to get down and dance in honour of the 10th anniversary of Batucada Carioca's arrival on the Toronto scene.

The St. Catharines resident, 29, is one of the attractions appearing at this weekend's Buffer Festival, a three-day event celebrating YouTube content in theatres across Toronto. It hosts theatrical screenings, video premieres and red carpet events.

Thousands of YouTube fans are expected to flock around people like Canada's cover song sweetheart Daniella Andrade, Toronto-based science geeks Mitchell Moffit and Gregory Brown and Lewis Hilsenteger, who has taken Unbox Therapy to new heights. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Readers react to transit columns

Metro's letters inbox reached overload with the number of comments and messages regarding columnist Edward Keenan's election series on public transit in the city, published daily since Tuesday. Here is a sampling:

Letters

This ship has sailed
The only way to go, should have been done 40 or 50 years ago. I can' t believe, what Edward Keenan wrote in the Metro Newspaper, completely out of reach with reality.
Maddalena Baxter

Up to here with wait
I used to be a big supporter of LRTs, but my frustration with long waits for streetcars — even on the new St. Clair right of way, where they don't have to contend with street traffic — has finally turned me off them.
A subway extension to Scarborough Town Centre makes ultimate sense, as does an extension of the Sheppard line to Victoria Park. And how about extending the Yonge subway line to Steeles? There's a project that's long overdue.
Also, if we can get more trains on the Yonge line as the TTC is promising, then we can deal with overcapacity. Incremental, rational change is what we need.
Andrew van Velzen

Focus on planning instead
The idea that everyone must flow into the city centre runs contrary to efficient planning. We all need to be able to work and find community resources within a short distance of our homes.
Planning a self-sustaining workshop-live environment in outer regions can be done using financial resources saved by eliminating the need for extensive transportation.
Building communities by creating a centre of commerce in each is, in the long run, healthier, and puts less pressure on traffic and city gridlock.
Amy Phelan

Subways, subways, subways
After spending years in the warehouse industry, I feel I can say with confidence that the majority of warehouse jobs are in the outskirts of the city.
My son lives in Scarborough and got a job at Kipling and Finch. A subway across Finch would have a significant effect on his travel time.
If Doug has aspirations to be Toronto's Hazel McCallion, and be in office for a 100 years, he could see the whole system completed.
Eli Jakeman

Ditch the roads
Why are we wasting money on highways for cars when we may not even have cars in 25 years. Why aren't we building GTA-wide subways to every corner of the city?
In 50 years, the subways will still be transporting millions of people around the city. The highways may be barren empty concrete slabs.
We spend billions on highways. Why not on subways which can transport many more millions of people?
The problem may be that the current politicians all have luxury vehicles and never ride public transport. They don't care about the poor public transport rider.
Richard Gnitecki

This is the kind of scene readers want to avoid in the future: Crowds of people lined up at Keele station. HANNAH YOON/THE CANADIAN PRESS FILE

Regret the error
Who wouldn't prefer subways? But, we can't afford them.
With the LRT a better option in terms of stops and that the money already being there, how could we turn our back on this?
So, as painful as it may seem to revisit, I think we must.
Sometimes admitting a mistake is the right thing to do.
Laura Hetherington

Make developers pay
Developers who want to add significant intensification to the Scarborough Town Centre and environs should pick up the tab of an equally significant portion of a subway extension. That's the way its done in other major cities. Lisa Sparrow

Do something now
We need REAL transit now and more subways should be a part of that. We need to do whatever it takes to get the most amount of people moving in the least amount of time NOW.
Ramsay Stewart

Total lunacy
What I think is lunacy is putting railway streetcars on the already busy and congested roads, open to the the elements and existing traffic.
It maybe cheaper in the short term, but in the medium to long term it's expensive lunacy.
Rather that waste taxpayers money, putting more streetcars on the already busy roads, we would be better off if additional buses were put there instead. Maurice Lennon

Respect for previous decisions
Over the past number of years, I have seen one government approve a plan just to have it ripped up after an election.
Every sensible transit strategy will take more than four years to realize. If governments keep changing their minds every four years, Toronto will simply have nothing.
I want a civic government that will respect the decisions that have already been made and put their efforts towards proposing new things that haven't yet been previously debated or approved.
Jensen Wong

Think of the children
Building smart tracks or above-ground trains or streetcars is not a solution for the future of the GTA.If Torontonians back in the '60s built trains or streetcars above ground, we'd be now in big trouble.
All tree options for improving GTA transportation will cost money, but choosing the cheapest option is never the solution, in any solution. We should all know this at the small level decisions that we already made in our lives.
Here we are dealing with decisions that will make a difference for this decade and many years from now. Yes, it can not be done for next year, but if you plan it based on priority, it can be accomplished — Rome was not built in a few years.
This is for our Children, grandchildren and the future of the GTA, so let's not make a big mistake.
Marian

Calling Ottawa and Queen's Park
You might call this "Secure that funding before building".
I believe subway is the way to go but before building can take place the federal and provincial funding commitment needs to be locked in.
Vito Mezzapelli

Keenan, get your numbers right!
The column of Mr. Keenan WAS fabulous until he said:
"On the existing Sheppard subway, trains during rush hour are filled to only 15 percent capacity"
WRONG!
Please go and update your knowledge about the subject and clarify it to Metro readers, who deserve respect and the truth.
Francisco Gonzales

Just fire this guy
Please fire this idiot, he makes your paper look bad.
Cullen Webster

Let's just agree on something
How do we create change so city council finally come to terms with figuring out a way to best spend taxpayers hard-earned money and build it? They will come if you build it. And we have to stop all these plans, meetings that accomplish nothing.
The time is now for both city council and the mayor to find a plan, stick to it and get going on building these new lines so we can move people to and from home and hopefully take cars off the road.

Vancouver's Oppenheimer Park tent city gone, many still homeless

Finding homes. More than 200 people lived in the park since the camp was first established in July

An overnight reprieve didn't stop a homeless camp from being dismantled by authorities on Thursday.

Several people were arrested by police Thursday afternoon after the majority of campers in Vancouver's Oppenheimer Park reluctantly packed up their belongings and left as volunteers, while city staff and fire officials dismantled tents and cleaned up the park under the watchful eye of a large police presence, in accordance with a court-ordered injunction.

Despite a Wednesday, 10 p.m. deadline to take down the tent city, police decided not to enforce the injunction in the middle of the night.

That seemed to have a calming effect the following morning on efforts to break up the camp, home to more than 200 people since July.

"It has been quite peaceful," said Pivot Legal Society lawyer DJ Larkin, who had a team of legal observers at the park. "The police are standing by, it's mostly fire rescue that have been interacting with people. From what I've seen, they've been doing so respectfully."

Authorities were pleased with the progress being made until approximately a dozen tents remained.

Police congregated at the park until about 4:30 p.m., when they moved in and arrested four people who refused to take down their tent.

A line of officers blocked off the police wagon and faced protesters who were singing and drumming while the campers were taken into custody.

The city says 56 campers are now living in permanent housing, and another 62 have been placed into temporary shelters as of Wednesday night. But resentment over the city's efforts to disperse the homeless still lingers.

Of the approximately 200 homeless people who have lived in tent city since July, the City of Vancouver has placed 56 in permanent housing, and another 62 in temporary shelters. MATT KIELTYKA/METRO

"They shouldn't have done it to begin with," said Dan Wallace, one of the camp's leading advocates. "Some campers are willing to take the facilities offered, but it doesn't work for everyone. There are a few couples here, they're not going to separate (to get into gender-specific shelters). The city is making the homeless homeless again, the logic is stupid."

Jeffrey Dean Caldwell, a homeless man who has camped at the park since July, said he was willing to stay at Oppenheimer and risk arrest.

"I'm here until the end, I have nothing to lose," he said. "The last couple of days have been frightening in the camp. (The city) wants us to go, but go where?"

Larkin said Pivot has been urging campers to comply with the court injunction.

"There are a few people who have said they'd like to stay and made a stand, our advice to them has been to not breach the court order," she said. "Many people are resigned to it, they know and are packing up. But they're also saying, 'I don't know where to go, I need more time, I don't have a plan.'"

Homelessness remains a major issue in Vancouver even with the camp gone, she said.

The regional district's 2014 homeless count recorded 2,770 people living without a home, an increase from 2,650 in 2011.

Street homelessness in Vancouver is nearly doubled to 538 people from 273 in 2013.

In addition to shelter spaces, the city says three buildings with 259 units of housing are slated to open soon.

The city has also commandeered a former hotel to temporarily house another 157 people starting in November.

The city has argued that conditions of the camp have steadily deteriorated and that it is unsafe, with Mayor Gregor Robertson pointing to the death of a 69-year-old man there as evidence of the poor conditions.

‘How do you go after the cyber-mob?’

‘GamerGate.’ Angry video game players are harassing female gamers; no one has been held responsible

Under the banner of “GamerGate,” angry video game players are harassing and threatening prominent women in the game community — and few, if any, are facing consequences.

GamerGate began in August, when a diatribe about game developer Zoe Quinn surfaced online, written by an ex-boyfriend and alleging she slept with a journalist to ensure a positive review for her game Depression Quest. Angry users pounced, spreading the allegations and sending Quinn threatening tweets and phone calls.

GamerGate supporters argue it has sparked a discussion about bias in video game journalism, while critics believe the movement is merely a front for misogynistic attacks.

“They say they’re about ethics in journalism, but the only thing they’ve produced in two months is harassment against marginalized people,” said Veerender Jubbal, an aspiring video game critic based in Brampton, Ont., and the creator of the #StopGamerGate2014 hashtag on Twitter.

Last week, game developer Brianna Wu fled her Boston home after her address was posted on the Internet alongside rape and death threats. The Twitter user responsible called Wu a “feminist asshat” and was upset she had mocked GamerGate.

On Tuesday, feminist media critic Anita Sarkeesian cancelled a lecture at Utah State University after the school received a threatening email. Sarkeesian — who hails from Toronto — was slated to speak about the portrayal of women in video games.

“I will write my manifesto in (Sarkeesian’s) spilled blood, and you will all bear witness to what feminist lies and poison have done to the men of America,” the letter said.

Despite the fact that many of the activities carried out under the GamerGate banner are illegal — such as harassment, slander and uttering threats or hate speech — no one has been held responsible or charged.

This Jan. 17, 2013, photo, provided by Anita Sarkeesian, shows her with vintage video game machines in Minneapolis. ALEX LAZARA/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Diversity in gaming

Jennifer Allaway is a U.S. researcher who studies diversity in the game industry. She has interviewed numerous gamers and developers and says GamerGate is in no way reflective of the broader video game community. According to Allaway’s findings:

1 78 per cent of women and 71 per cent of men support attempts to hire more women in the game industry.

2 87 per cent of women and 70 per cent of men want to see more female protagonists in video games.

3 83 per cent of women and 73 per cent of men believe diverse development teams create better-quality games.

“We actually don’t have legislation that’s caught up with the nature of these threats,” said York University professor Jennifer Jenson. “Right now, we have no real recourse.”

For Jenson, the problem is less about the need for new laws than it is about the need to enforce those that exist. She believes police need to be better educated on how the law applies to online activity.

“A lot of people, when they go to report cyber-harassment to the police, they feel like they’re talking to a brick wall,” she said.

Danielle Citron, a legal scholar at the University of Maryland, agrees. Her recent book, Hate Crimes in Cyberspace, features interviews with Anita Sarkeesian and describes how initially, she was reluctant to approach police.

“There were hundreds and hundreds of posts. It was daunting,” Citron said. “How do you go after the cyber-mob?”

The FBI is investigating some of the threats made against Sarkeesian — particularly a bomb threat that was sent to the Game Developers Choice Awards in San Francisco last March — and Citron is hopeful that some of the worst offenders may actually end up before a court.

Drone that sparked soccer brawl found

Flag flap. Albanian banner flown over Serbian fans sparked jeers, fights and attacks on players

Serbian police have found the drone that flew an Albanian nationalist banner over a soccer stadium in Belgrade, igniting a brawl on the field and fuelling political tensions between Balkan rivals Serbia and Albania.

The small drone with four rotors — last seen being carried off by a Serb fan during the stadium brawl Tuesday night — will be checked to see where it was manufactured and purchased and who could have flown it, police chief Nebojsa Stefanovic said.

He accused Albanians of being "exclusively" to blame for the clashes.

The violence broke out after the drone, dangling a map of Albania, enlarged to include chunks of several neighbours, circled over the field. The match was later abandoned.

UEFA, the governing body of European soccer, opened disciplinary cases against both countries over the game. Besides the brawls on the field, the Albanian anthem was loudly jeered by Serbian fans before the game in Belgrade, and derogatory chants were heard throughout. Serbian supporters also threw flares and other objects at Albanian players, as well as attacking them on the field.

The Albanian Football Federation said its players were repeatedly hit by fans and police and had to endure offensive chants like "Kill the Albanians!"

It defended the Albanian players' decision not to continue the match.

Historic feud

Serbia and Albania have been at odds for decades, mainly over Kosovo, a former ethnic Albanian-dominated Serbian province that declared independence in 2008. Serbia has never accepted that decision.

Pistorius trial. Olympian must pay for his crime, victim's cousin pleads

Oscar Pistorius must "pay for what he's done" and his apology to the family of the girlfriend he killed was not sincere, a cousin of Reeva Steenkamp said Thursday as testimonies wrapped up.

Kim Martin spoke on the fourth day of the sentencing portion of the double-amputee Olympian's trial. Following the testimony and final arguments, Judge Thokozile Masipa will rule on the punishment for Pistorius after convicting him of culpable homicide for shooting Steenkamp through a washroom door in his home.

"My lady, I really believe the accused, Mr. Pistorius, needs to pay for what he's done," Martin testified. "My family are not seeking revenge. We just feel to take somebody's life, to shoot somebody behind the door who is unarmed, who is harmless, needs sufficient punishment."

Just after court adjourned for lunch, Pistorius' sister Aimee became distraught, telling her family that a man behind her in the gallery had mouthed an obscenity at her.

Pistorius' brother, Carl, said he would inform police of the incident.

Pistorius faces up to 15 years in prison.

‘We were lucky,’ says Canadian survivor

Himalayan tragedy. Quebec woman tells harrowing tale of surviving avalanche in Nepal’s mountains

A Canadian survivor of the Nepal avalanche that killed at least 27 people has described being buried waist-high in thick, heavy snow on a “nightmare” of a day.

Quebecer Sonia Leveque said she thought she was going to die and that she and her fellow trekkers are fortunate to be alive. “We fought for survival and we were lucky,” she told RDI, Radio-Canada’s all-news network.

She said nobody in her small group saw the avalanche coming. “It happened extremely quickly — within seconds, we were separated,” Leveque said.

“Three people in our group were swept away (and) we tried to find them but there was about 20 metres of snow accumulated at the bottom of the avalanche.”

The death toll in the tragedy was revised upward Thursday to 27, with four Canadians among the dead and others among the roughly 70 people missing.

Three Quebec women were reported missing, including Genevieve Adam. Her father feared the worst as he travelled to Nepal. His brother, Francois Adam, said Genevieve was asleep in her tent with other trekkers.

“What I know is that it happened at around four o’clock in the morning,” he said. “She was sleeping, (and) bang! it hit and passed over them and they were carried down along with the avalanche.” THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Climate experts say rising global temperatures have contributed to avalanches in the Himalayas.

Canadian woman tried to enter U.S. by kayak: Officials

A Canadian woman is in custody after American federal authorities say she tried to enter the U.S. illegally by kayaking across the Niagara River near Buffalo.

The Buffalo News reports that U.S. Border Patrol agents were alerted by Canadian police that a woman was kayaking across the river from Ontario toward Beaver Island State Park on Grand Island, New York, just north of Buffalo.

Officials say 32-year-old Olivia Leigh Suriani was apprehended as she approached a taxi near the park. She appeared before a U.S. magistrate in Buffalo on a charge of illegal re-entry. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cellphone encryption

FBI director warns new technology could derail probes

FBI Director James Comey warned in stark terms Thursday against the push by technology companies to encrypt smartphone data and operating systems, arguing that murder cases could be stalled, suspects could walk free and justice could be thwarted by a locked phone or an encrypted hard drive. He singled out the recent announcements by Apple and Google that their new operating systems are encrypted.

Privacy advocates and technology experts called the concerns exaggerated and little more than recycled arguments the government has raised against encryption since the early 1990s. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pee in a cup, break a world record?

Sexually transmitted infections. Group attempts to test most people in 24 hours

MIKE DONACHIE
Metro in London, Ont.

Middlesex-London Health Unit worker Brittany Van Horik collects urine samples Thursday at Fansahwe College. MIKE DONACHIE/METRO

The student union at London, Ont.'s Fanshawe College was handing out cups Thursday, but they didn't contain coffee.

The area sees five cases of chlamydia a day, according to the Middlesex-London Health Unit, and so health workers are raising awareness by attempting to set a Guinness world record for the most tests for sexually transmitted infections in 24 hours.

The health unit will make two attempts, the first began Thursday at Fanshawe and the second will take place at nearby Western University on Tuesday. The record of 767 tests was set in Basingstoke, England, on Valentine's Day in 2013.

Students at the University of Calgary attempted to break the record in April but were unsuccessful, recording 501 tests.

Students take a sample cup into the washroom and bring it back with urine. The sample will be tested for chlamydia and gonorrhea, and anyone with a positive result will be contacted.

"Chlamydia and gonorrhea (positive results) are higher than the provincial average in Middlesex-London," said health promoter Chris Blain.

Among those being tested were nursing students Michael Cunha and Burcu Iltan.

"It's better to raise awareness," Iltan said. "As nursing students, that's ideally what we should be doing."

Cunha chipped in: "We should be an example and help alleviate the stigma."

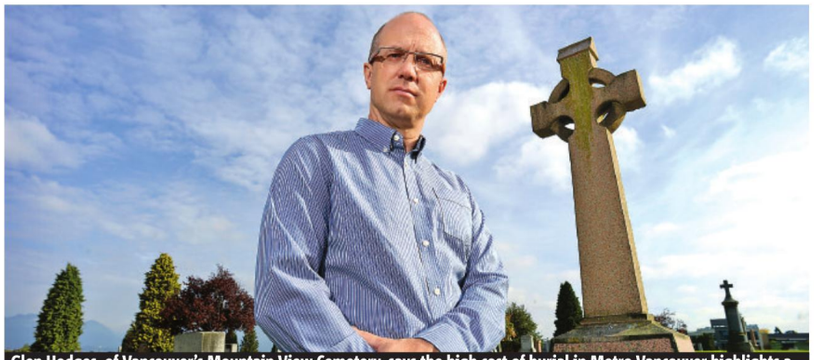
Think Vancouver housing is pricey? Check out its cemeteries

Cost of real estate for the dead. From cheap, or at least reasonable in Calgary, Saskatoon, Halifax; B.C.'s charges are out of sight

THANDI FLETCHER
Metro in Vancouver



Glen Hodges, of Vancouver's Mountain View Cemetery, says the high cost of burial in Metro Vancouver highlights a need for B.C. to look at changing legislation that determines how cemeteries can sell plots. JENNIFER GAUTHIER/METRO

Canadians have long complained about the high cost of living, especially in our larger cities such as Vancouver.

But as graveyards fill up and land prices soar, parts of Canada are becoming expensive places to die — especially Vancouver. Other places in Canada seem relatively inexpensive.

For example, at some Metro Vancouver cemeteries where vacancy is running low, asking prices for in-ground burial plots with space for two caskets can run as high as $52,000, while a double crypt mausoleum can come with a price tag as steep as $60,000.

According to industry experts, that high cost of burial is only going to keep rising as graveyard space continues to dwindle in a city already notorious for its sky-high real estate prices. They say the issue highlights a need for changes to provincial legislation that controls how cemeteries can sell burial plots.

"We're going to hit that wall eventually," said Glen Hodges, manager of Mountain View Cemetery in Mount Pleasant.

"The space that exists is basically the space we already have, so as those cemeteries start to fill up ... that puts pressure on those cemeteries in terms of pricing that remaining space."

At Mountain View, the City of Vancouver's only cemetery, Hodges said there are only 700 or 800 graves still available for casket burials.

The cost of a burial plot is $22,500, he said, which includes space for up to two caskets, up to eight cremated remains and up to four grave markers.

While the price may seem exorbitant, Hodges said the fee is "good value" considering families can reuse the burial plot, placing two new caskets every 40 years, a perk that is only offered at Mountain View.

At private cemeteries, the cost can run even higher. In Burnaby, B.C. a double-depth plot at Ocean View Burial Park ranges from $30,000 to $52,000.

Price survey

Casket burial prices across Canada:

- Vancouver. Ranges from $22,500 at city's cemetery to $52,000 at private cemetery in Burnaby.
- Calgary. $2,952 at city's cemeteries.
- Saskatoon. Ranges from $1,385 to $1,815 at city's cemetery.
- Halifax. Ranges from $1,581 to $3,162 at St. John's Cemetery.
- Toronto. Cheap compared to Vancouver. Ranges from $6,000 to $8,885 at Toronto Necropolis cemetery.

Apple's new iPad Air 2 faster and more svelte

Apple unveiled a thinner iPad Thursday with a faster processor and a better camera as it tries to drive excitement for tablets amid slowing demand.

The iPad Air 2 also adds many of the features previously available on iPhones, and includes a fingerprint ID sensor for use instead of a passcode.

Meanwhile, Apple made its new Mac operating system, Yosemite, available as a free download starting Thursday.

Apple Pay, the company's new system for using iPhones to make credit and debit card payments at retail stores, will launch on Monday.

Phil Schiller, Apple senior VP, talks iPad pricing on Thursday. AP

Driving the tablet market

The iPad Air 2 will start at $499.

New iPads

Apple's new tablet is 18 per cent and 6.1 millimetres thinner than the previous version.

The rear camera is boosted to eight megapixels, matching what's found in iPhones.

Mac Updates

The company unveiled new iMacs with a sharper display. Apple also released its new Yosemite operating system for Macs as a free download.

The Mac update include new functionality, such as the ability to make phone calls with an iPhone nearby and a one-stop search tool for both locally stored documents and online resources.

Apple Pay

Deals have been made with hundreds of additional credit card issuers since the new payment service was announced last month.

With Apple Pay, iPhone 6 and 6 Plus owners will be able to make payments at brick-and-mortar stores by holding their phone near a card reader.

The new iPhones have a wireless chip to transmit the information needed to complete the transaction.

Consumers aren't likely to abandon plastic credit cards until a majority of retailers, especially smaller merchants, accept payments such as those from Apple Pay.

But Apple Pay may spur transactions over mobile Web browsers and apps this holiday season, since it lets consumers avoid typing in credit card information each time.

What's in Your Beauty Products?

The average woman applies more than 500 chemicals to her body every day.

Every day millions of women slap on body moisturizer, apply lipstick or mascara without a second thought about what they are putting on their skin. A study from the UK claims that the average woman applies more than 500 chemicals to her body every day during her beauty routine.

Why should you be concerned?

Chemicals such as parabens (a synthetic preservative in everything from toothpaste to shampoo) and phthalates (a class of chemicals that are found in many "fragranced" beauty products such as lotions, perfumes and deodorants) are classified as xenoestrogens. Xenoestrogens mimic our natural estrogens creating hormone chaos by increasing the total amount of estrogen, resulting in a condition called estrogen dominance. Estrogen dominance has been implicated in many conditions including: breast and prostate cancer, obesity, infertility, endometriosis, uterine fibroids, early onset puberty, hormonal acne and PMS.

Xeno-Detox Every Day

EstroSense is a comprehensive liver detoxifier that gently supports the elimination of harmful environmental toxins and helps to bring back hormone synergy. Along with other key ingredients, EstroSense contains milk thistle which is one of the most researched herbs when it comes to liver detoxification and liver cell regeneration. Curcumin, indole-3-carbinol, sulforaphane, calcium-d-glucarate, green tea extract, lycopene and rosemary extract are all very effective for supporting healthy hormone balance.

So starting now, read labels and stay informed, check out The Environmental Working Group website www.ewg.org as well as Campaign for Safe Cosmetics www.safecosmetics.org for more information about how you can protect yourself.

Can entrepreneur convince Bay Street to buy into Bitcoin?

CAVIRTEX founder Joseph David. JESSICA SMITH-CROSS/METRO

CAVIRTEX. 'I've been preparing all my life for this': Founder of e-currency exchange

JESSICA SMITH CROSS
jessica.smithcross@metronews.ca

Calgarian Joseph David has come to Toronto seeking money. He's the founder of Canada's first and largest Bitcoin currency exchange, and he's hoping to convince Canada's traditional financial establishment to get into Bitcoin.

"I've been preparing all my life for this," said David in an interview at the Intercontinental Hotel.

David gave a presentation at the World Money Show on Thursday. He's hoping to get players in "mainstream finance" interested in Bitcoin so they'll be customers of his exchange, CAVIRTEX (pronounced "C–A Virtex"), which charges 0.5 to 1.5 per cent to exchange Bitcoins for Canadian dollars, depending on the value of the trade.

"I'm looking forward to getting onstage in front of financial industry experts and mainstream finance, who haven't even heard of Bitcoin yet," he said.

He's also attempting to secure venture capital support for his company to expand and launch the first Bitcoin investment fund in Canada.

He may have a tough time: The volume of Bitcoin trading has gone down over the past six months, as has its price. Bitcoin is currently trading at about $430, significantly down from its peak of almost $1,200.

When David got into Bitcoin, it was worth about $1.

In 2010, a friend told David about the virtual currency and he shuttered his telecom company to go into Bitcoin full-time.

"I asked, 'Where do you buy it?' And the answer, back then, was at a Denny's in Calgary on Macleod Trail. It was like a dating service: You had to go online and find someone," he said. "You had to go with the laptop and the cash and shake hands.

So David saw the need for a Canadian currency Bitcoin exchange to make it easy for everyone to buy, and launched CAVIRTEX in 2011.

Last winter, in the months after the FBI brought unprecedented worldwide attention to Bitcoin by busting Silk Road — the illegal online market that used the currency — Bitcoin hit its all-time-high value.

But then in March, the world's largest Bitcoin exchange, Mt. Gox, imploded into bankruptcy through alleged hacking and mismanagement, taking customer's wealth and, according to David, many people's faith in Bitcoin, with it.

"The interest just died down and there was fear," he said.

Now he thinks that fear is easing and Bitcoin has recently seen a small rally.

2 Seth Rogen's mom. There has to be a punchline when a comedian's parent tries to figure out social media. Take Seth Rogen's mom, Sandy, for example. Her series of LOL tweets included "i am trying to tweet a picture and i can't. and if you answer me i can't figure out how to see it. seth call me." Seth's tweet response/punchline: "My mom @RogenSandy is not adapting to her new role as a Twitter giant just yet."

3 Dallas Green & Pink? In seemingly the most unlikely of collaborations, Canada's indie-rocker Dallas Green (a.k.a. City and Colour) and Alecia Moore (a.k.a. pop star Pink) released a country-folksy album this week called Rose Ave. under the moniker You+Me. Recorded over eight days, it's actually terrific, and these friends could have one of the breakout indie albums of the year.

4 Sexiest tired person. 40-year-old Penelope Cruz was chosen by Esquire as this year's Sexiest Woman Alive in its new November issue. But as Penelope (mother of two young children) told the magazine, she feels more like a "mother who doesn't get enough sleep." In other words, Esquire should have called this the Sexiest Most Exhausted Mother Alive.

5 R.I.P. Ralph the Programme Guy. For decades, Raphael Platner — a.k.a. Ralph the Programme Guy — was a fixture in his tight athletic shorts and thick-framed glasses selling programmes at Toronto sporting and entertainment events. 6 Arresting humour. Standup comedian Adam Newman was performing at Upright Citizens Brigade theatre in New York when NYPD police officers doing an arrest there interrupted his set. Newman improvised and attempted to bring the cops into his standup act, to which one responded, "Shut the f— up." In other words, possibly the best heckler of all time during a comic act.

7 Beyoncé's bangs. Paparazzi pics showing Beyoncé sporting a new Bettie Page 'do left some people scratching their heads and others pulling out their hair on social media over the style. Really now, all this fuss over a new hairstyle is just a tad ridiculous. But this is the pop culture world we live in. George Clooney just needs to tweet a picture of himself in a wrinkled Armani suit and we can all move on.

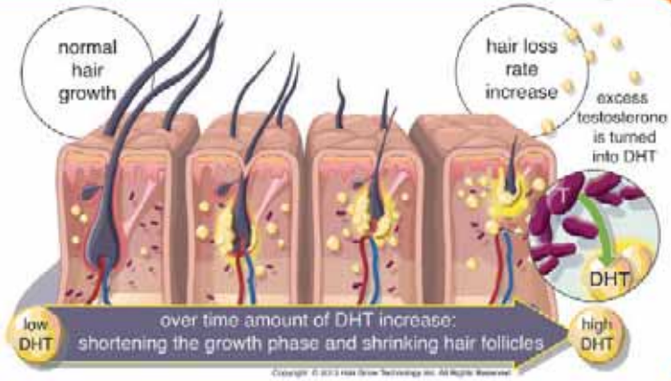
STOP HAIR LOSS

#1 SELLING IN CANADA

for MEN and for WOMEN

What Causes Hair Loss?

Hair loss is caused by multiple factors; health, medication, diet, stress, illness and hereditary genetics. One major reason is hereditary genetics which determine our potential hair loss condition. Some people see hair loss in their 20's, while others see little hair loss over their lifetime. An enzyme called 5-alpha reductase converts testosterone into dihydrotestosterone (DHT), which inhibits hair production and degrade the follicles over time. This condition is known as androgenic alopecia (AGA), also called male and female pattern baldness. As DHT attack the hair follicles it will lead to thinner and more fragile hair as you age.



normal hair growth

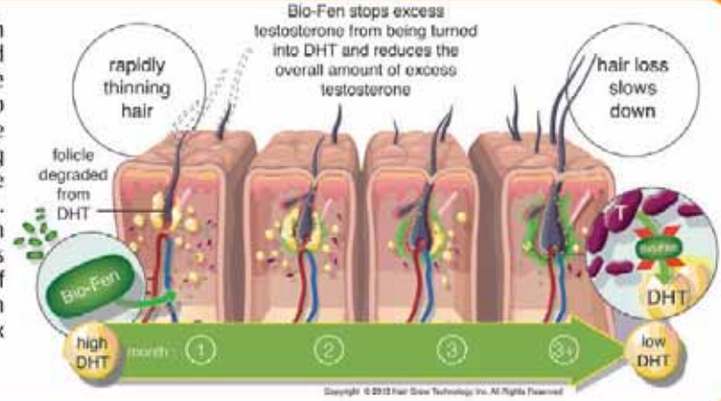
over time amount of DHT increase:
shortening the growth phase and shrinking hair follicles
high DHT

How does Bio-Fen® PLUS work?

The fenugreek seed extract in both formulas reduces excess blood lipid levels. Fenugreek contains an active plant sterol, which has been shown to inhibit 5-alpha-reductase activity – the enzyme responsible for converting excess testosterone to DHT (which is the primary molecule that causes hair loss). The SDG from flax lignans in both formulas also decreases excess cholesterol - the building block of testosterone. Based on new research on the rate of metabolism of SDG in flax lignans (8-12 hours on average).



How long must I use Bio-Fen® Plus?

Bio-Fen® Plus for Men capsules are usually effective at stopping hair loss within the first two months. However, since healthy hair grows only about 1 cm each month, it may take up to three months before you notice that hair growth is increased or the rate of hair loss is decreased. Anyone experiencing new growth should see it within four months. Once you stop completely your hair growth pattern will slowly go back to the point where you started.

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

metro AR Brad Pitt takes on another war movie. Scan this photo with your Metro News app to see some explosive, intense, behind-the-scenes action from the set of Fury. CONTRIBUTED

Synopsis

Set in April 1945, Fury sees hard-bitten commander "Wardaddy" Collier (Brad Pitt) lead a U.S. 2nd armoured division tank nicknamed Fury through Germany in the final days of the Second World War. His crew, "Bible" Swan (Shia LaBeouf, once again acting opposite giant machines), Gordo (Michael Peña) and redneck Grady (Jon Bernthal), have fought together since the beginning of the war. When Norman Ellison (Logan Lerman), a new gunner recruit with no battle experience, signs on, he must fit in or endanger the entire crew. "You are no use to me if you can't kill krauts," says Wardaddy.

- Mark: ●●●●○

Fury. Beneath the mud and body parts is a primal film that refuses to glamorize the Second World War

Richard: Mark, Fury is a brutal war film with exciting and well-executed battle sequences, but its most vicious scene takes place over a meal, at a table set with a lace tablecloth. It happens midway in the film after the crew has captured a German town. Once bullets stop flying, two local women prepare a meal for Wardaddy and Norman. The long scene begins with tension as the ladies try to figure out if the Nazi hunters mean them harm, but when the core group crowds around the table it becomes something akin to a surreal family dinner where real humanity, or lack thereof, is laid bare. It could have stopped the movie dead, but instead is a welcome interlude that showcases the effects of battle on a tightly knit but disparate group of men.

Mark: Yes, Richard, it's an excruciating scene, and I mean that in the best way. What I liked about it was the way it disposed of the "greatest generation" mythology and showed American soldiers as borderline rapists and sadists. Not Pitt, of course, who is just and fair, but some of the soldiers who saved us from the Nazis were swine themselves. It is a depressing irony in a film that's too tough for irony. I admired the general toughness of the movie. War is not glamorized; it's shown to be a cesspool of degradation, a literal mud bath. I can't even imagine what the mud budget was for the picture.

RC: The mud budget and the cost of the fake body parts that litter the battlefield must have rivalled Pitt's salary. Those are the details, however, that give the movie so much of its grit. The dinner scene helps open the movie up and keep it from becoming Das Boot on land, but I was fascinated by the tank interiors. A sense of claustrophobia, tension and fear percolates inside the tank cab and literally bleeds off the screen. It helps that the performances are very strong, but it's the primal feeling of being trapped inside the small space that gives the movie much of its oomph.

MB: Yes, I couldn't get into the elevator after I saw the film. The performances are strong, as you say, and I was most impressed by Shia LaBoeuf, who we can now all forgive for all those Transformers movies. Michael Peña is great, but he's always great. A real surprise is Jon Bernthal, a relative newcomer, who nails his southern-fried redneck character as a man you equally hate and pity. And what did you think of Pitt, Richard?

RC: Pitt really pulls this off. At first I was concerned he was going to hand in a rehash of his Nazi-hunting character from Inglourious Basterds. That character was over-the-top, and so is this one in his own way. Much of his dialogue sounds like it was written by Quentin Tarantino, but the character is deeper, not so much in what he says, but in his quiet scenes when everything you need to know about him is written on his face.

MB: The sadness is even in his haircut, which has its own gravitational pull.

Why we page the spirit world

Ouija. Another film about the cardboard conduit to the other side is being released, which prompts us to ponder the power of the board

CHRIS ALEXANDER
scene@metronews.ca

Ouija opens next Friday. CONTRIBUTED

The defining mystery of our species is what happens after our heart stops beating. Indeed, questions surrounding death serve as the foundations of our life and the idea that life can exist after death is the root source of all our mythology.

But if people can exist post-humously, if souls exist and continue to be trapped in some kind of spectral plane, how would we reach them? More importantly — how could they reach us?

Enter the Ouija board.

The Ouija, that mysterious alphanumerical board game, has, since it first became commercially available in 1891, fascinated and terrified those who have dared to make contact with the dead, either on a lark or with serious intent.

Its powers now largely debunked, the Ouija board has long been a staple of parties, especially popular amongst giddy teens, but there was a time when the Ouija board was thought to be a legitimate conduit to the ether. And real or not, the idea of the Ouija board is still potent enough that even the most sophisticated individual might break a sweat when clustered together with a group of people, hands employing centrifugal force to make the board "talk." That's the idea behind Ouija, opening next week and the latest in a long line of horror films that have mined the mysteries of the purportedly haunted, mass-marketed "talking board."

13 Ghosts (1960)

Gimmick-master William Castle's goofy horror classic in which Ghost Viewers were exploited to see the spooks on-screen, boasts only one legitimately frightening scene, when the family hunkers down in their new house and drags out the Ouija. As the music swells, the tone in the room turns from jovial to jarring as the walls rattle and the board steers itself to swear violent death to all those in the home.

The Exorcist (1973)

Fans of this essential fright flick tend to cite the more visceral moments of self-abuse and pea-soup puking, but for our money, the eeriest moment occurs when young Regan (Linda Blair) tells her mom plainly that someone or something named "Captain Howdy" is speaking to her through her Ouija board.

Witchboard (1986)

The most famous of all Ouija board shockers, in which future O.J. Simpson squeeze Tawny Kitaen messes around with the game and opens up a spectral portal to Hell, getting possessed by a malevolent spirit in the process. A major hit with gullible kids in the 1980s, the film spawned several lame sequels and spiked Ouija board sales worldwide.

What Lies Beneath (2000)

This undervalued suspense masterclass has a pivotal plot arc when a harried housewife (Michelle Pfeiffer), convinced her home is haunted, goes to her local discount store to buy a Ouija board and proceeds to use it ... in the bathroom, of all places. Like Pfeiffer does in that film, you, too, can pick up a Ouija board for a few bucks. But the question remains: should you?

Schwartzman embraces playing a jerk

Listen Up Philip.
Actor went full-throttle despicable for his latest role

MATT PRIGGE
Metro World News in New York

When he received the script for Listen Up Philip, Jason Schwartzman was taken aback both by the material — in which he plays a novelist who consciously decides to be more of an a—hole, including to his girlfriend (Elisabeth Moss) — and the size of the script. It was as big as a phone book.

"It was very well-written — which I admire, because a lot of scripts aren't. They're just blueprints, just to get simple ideas across," says Schwartzman.

"But Alex's read like you could just read it and not have to see the movie, in a weird way. The pleasure of reading it was nice, but very uncomfortable."

That's a good thing, too, since Schwartzman wound up rereading it often. Jeff Goldblum, a fellow actor in The Grand Budapest Hotel, gave him advice. "He told me when he gets a job, he reads the script every day, from start to finish. That could be 40 times he might read a script. I decided I wanted to try that, to read the Jeff Goldblum way," he says. Part of that was out of necessity. "It's so dense, there's so much dialogue. It's only going to work if you know it and can say it fast."

He had to contend with playing a character who, for most people, will be unlikable: rude and dismissive and insulting, burning bridges because he feel he can, who idolizes a miserable, Philip Roth-y hero (Jonathan Pryce). But softening him, Schwartzman argues, would make him worse.

"Every time we'd experiment with making him more likable, we'd make him more unlikable, because he became passive-aggressive — which I feel is the worst. If you're passive-aggressive, that's the lowest," Schwartzman says.

"It became great that Philip was so direct and clear. You kind of always knew where you stood with him.

"There's something fun about that. If the character was saying mean things only here and there, it'd be a different movie. But it's so extreme, it's in the red. You just had to say, 'F— it, this is gong to be in the red. Let's just play it loud.'"

Not that his better half is all that better. Moss told Schwartzman that she wanted to play her character, Ashley, like a version of Philip.

"They're not that different. Even though she's sweeter, she, too, is self-consumed. She wouldn't be an easy person to date," he says.

By the time they were on-set they were arguing, almost in character. "I was sticking up for Philip, whose actions are sometimes just terrible. And I said, 'Look, you don't exactly make it easy.' I only saw it from his point of view."

If Philip has any redeeming qualities, it's that he wasn't always this way. "Alex and I talked about him as a guy who was drinking a little bit, then drinking a little bit more, and then drinking a little bit more, and before you knew it he was addicted," reveals Schwartzman.

"Maybe in the beginning he's experimenting with being so brutally mean and cruel, and it slowly overtakes him before he realizes he's lost touch."

Listen Up Philip opens in select theatres this month.

What's the Big deal? Noth Carries on about misunderstood SATC cad

Chris Noth would like to take issue with a lingering Sex and the City point. People have always been unfairly harsh about his character, Big, apparently. "He never tried to pretend he was anything other than what he was. It was (Carrie) who tried to pretend he was something he wasn't," he tells Australia's news.com.au in an interview. "He never cheated on her. The relationship just didn't work, and he went on to get married while she went on to ... how many boyfriends did she have? She was such a whore! There's a misconception that Carrie was a victim of him, and that's not the case."

Dakota wants to pull the Shades on family viewing

Maybe Dakota Johnson is rethinking her decision to star in the film adaptation of 50 Shades of Grey, as the young actress doesn't want her family to watch it, according to the National Enquirer. Sources say Johnson "can't bear the thought" of her parents, Melanie Griffith and Don Johnson, or her grandmother, Tippi Hedren, watching the film's steamier and kinkier elements. She is apparently OK with 18-year-old half-sister Stella Banderas watching, though. The film's getting a pretty wide release, so if she really wants to be this picky about who can and can't see it, she'll have her work cut out for her.

Robin Thicke comes to an unpretty posse

NED EHRBAR
Metro in Hollywood

Robin Thicke may have lost Paula Patton, but he's gained a notorious gang of new friends. The Blurred Lines singer has apparently been inducted as the newest member of Leonardo DiCaprio's infamous group of guy pals with a … rather unfortunate nickname.

Really, the group is a longstanding thing. There's even an infamous NY Mag piece about them from 1998. Members who've been by Leo's side for years include Lukas Haas, Kevin Connolly and David Blaine, and the most recent inductee before Thicke was reportedly Jonah Hill, so who wouldn't want to join? Anyway, according to Page Six, Thicke announced his inclusion in the … posse by throwing himself a divorce party — so classy — in L.A. recently. "There were a lot of models there. Leo and Robin were being super flirtatious and talking to tons of girls," a source says. "Robin, in particular, was dancing and talking to a pretty brunette throughout most of the night. At one point, he grabbed a girl's hand and was like, 'Let's dance.'" What a lucky lady.

It was no lickety split, but Seal and Heidi are so over it already

It took nearly three years of negotiating, but Heidi Klum and Seal are finally officially divorced, with the agreement finalized earlier this week, according to TMZ. The Project Runway host and the Kiss from a Rose singer were married seven years before splitting up in January 2012. The divorce must have not been that heated, as the two have been seen attending their kids' soccer games recently, looking perfectly friendly. Klum, for her part, has already moved on and is reportedly dating 27-year-old playboy Vito Schnabel. Wait, wait, wait. Playboy is still an actual, viable profession? For serious? I knew I picked the wrong major in college.

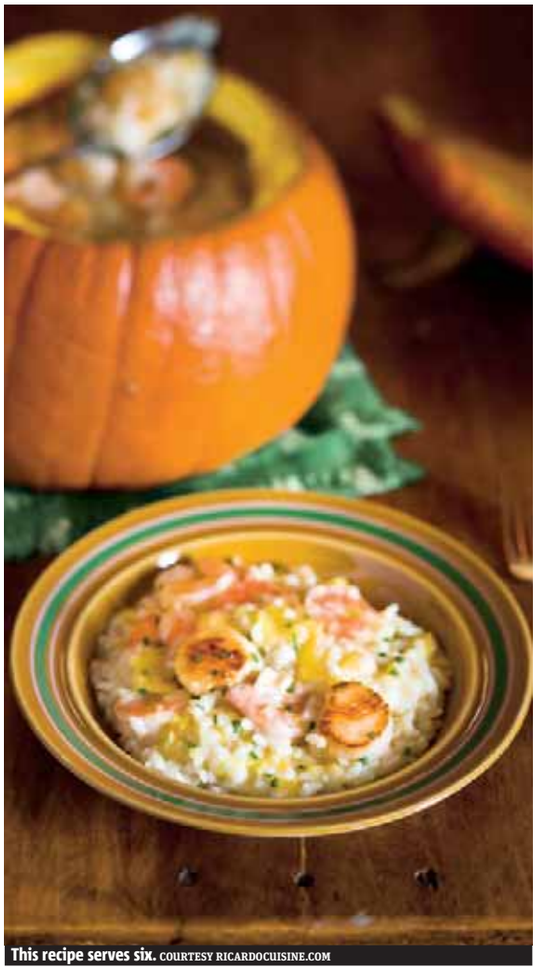
Carve out a new purpose for pumpkin



This recipe serves six. COURTESY RICARDOCUISINE.COM

Pumpkin and Seafood Risotto. You may be sick of pie, but this fall staple can also be a savoury flavour enhancer

RICARDO COOKS
Chef Ricardo
Ricardo Magazine

Jack-o'-lanterns are fun, but my favourite uses for pumpkins involve a little seafood. It's time to see pumpkins in a new light.

1. With the rack in the lowest position, preheat the oven to 350 F (180 C).

2. With a knife, remove the top of the pumpkin. With a spoon, scrape out the seeds until the inside of the pumpkin is smooth. Lightly oil the pumpkin, inside and out. Season the inside with salt and pepper. Place on a baking sheet. Bake for about 1 hour and 30 minutes or until the flesh is tender. Keep warm.

3. Meanwhile, in a saucepan, heat the chicken broth and clam juice. Set aside.

4. In another saucepan, soften the shallots in the butter. Add the rice and coat with the butter. Add the broth, about 1 cup (250 ml) at a time, stirring frequently until the liquid has been completely absorbed before adding more broth. After about 20 minutes, the rice should be al dente. Remove from the heat and stir in the cheese. Adjust the seasoning. Pour into the pumpkin, stir and scrape some flesh into the risotto, to taste. Adjust the seasoning.

5. Meanwhile, in a large nonstick skillet, sear the scallops and shrimp, one after the other, in the oil. Season with salt and pepper. Stir seafood and chive in the risotto. Place the pumpkin in a serving dish in the centre of the table. FOLLOW RICARDO ON SOCIAL MEDIA AND ON RICARDOCUISINE.COM OR SUBSCRIBE TO HIS MAGAZINE'S ENGLISH EDITION, WHICH LAUNCHED THIS SEPTEMBER!

Ingredients

- 1 pumpkin, about 6 1/2 lb (3 kg)
- olive oil, for brushing
- 4 cups (1 litre) chicken broth
- 1 cup (250 ml) clam juice
- 1/2 cup (125 ml) shallots, finely chopped
- 1/4 cup (60 ml) butter
- 2 cups (500 ml) arborio rice
- 1 cup (250 ml) grated Parmigiano-Reggiano cheese
- Salt and pepper

Topping

- 3/4 lb (350 g) medium-sized scallops, patted dry
- 3/4 lb (350 g) medium-sized shrimp, shelled, deveined and patted dry
- 3 tbsp (45 ml) olive oil
- 2 tbsp (30 ml) chopped fresh chives

With Thanksgiving done and dusted, the only pumpkin most of you may be interested in seeing is one grinning at you from your front porch on Halloween.

I'm betting the lack of post-holiday love for jack-o'-lantern meat as a meal ingredient is because we associate it only with pie.

Ricardo gets his gourd on in this week's recipe: a twist on seafood risotto that not only features pumpkin as a flavour enhancer, but as a serving receptacle as well.

With or without the vegetal element, seafood risotto is a white wine drinker's dish.

Something light, dry and slightly citrusy will go swimmingly with the aquatic highlights, temper the risotto's earthiness and lift the aromatics of the pumpkin flesh.

With its subtle effervescence, a dry Italian Prosecco would be a fine choice, as would a crisp pinot grigio.

The 2013 Bolla Pinot Grigio ($11.95 - $14.50) is refreshingly old-school in its gentle expression of the grape.

Soft, fragrant and with nice acidity, it's a perfect partner for this fall fare.

Mackage x Notable Fashion Week After-Party

Date: Oct. 22
Location: EFS

Fashion Week in Toronto is obviously about the fashion ... but it's also about the after-parties. With Maybelline New York as sponsors, Mackage and Notable.ca are teaming up to throw an exclusive shindig at EFS with all the makings of a memorable fashion week celebration. Check the Notable.ca website to apply for the guest list.

Catwalk 2 Closet

Date: Oct. 23-26
Location: Heritage Court – Direct Energy Center (CNE)

If you like the most fashionable clothing, endless variety and crazy-good deals, then you should make your way to the largest designer sample sale in Toronto. C2C is new consumer show selling designer and high-end label samples as well as surplus inventories at wholesale prices or better. Brands include Criminal Damage, Boy London, Sam Edelman, BCBGeneration, Victorinox, Rachel Roy, Nine West and more.

Enbridge CN Tower Climb

Date: Oct. 18 and 19
Location: The CN Tower

The Enbridge CN Tower Climb is designed to elevate our city as it raises funds for the United Way, which provides support and opportunities to our most impoverished. It's a $75 minimum donation, but of course everyone is encouraged to raise more. Online registration is now closed but you can swing by the Metro Toronto Convention Centre the day of and sign up in person. If there's one weekend to make sure you don't forget leg day, this is this one.

Taste Matters

Date: Oct. 21
Location: The Liberty Grand

Carrying on the goodwill towards the youth of our Canadian cities, Taste Matters is returning this year with an outstanding lineup of food and beverage hosts. Starting at $100 per ticket, you can enjoy fine cuisine and spirits while supporting the 20-year-old Eva's Initiatives, a charity that works locally and nationally to reduce and end youth homelessness. In Toronto alone, the group provides safe shelter for 114 youth aged 16 to 24 each night.

Booby Ball presents: Big Top Booby

Date: Oct. 17
Location: The Guvernment

Rethink Breast Cancer is back with another Booby Ball and this year's event looks like it's going to be pushing the limits of spectacular. The evening includes complimentary bar, cirque-inspired snacks, surprises and an auction that includes products and services from about 100 different brands. Tickets have sold out, but think pink, put in some legwork, and you've still got a shot to get into one of the year's best parties.

Canadian Beauty Innovation Awards and showroom

Date: Oct. 17-19
Location: Heritage Building (340 King St. E.)

You'll want to get involved with this year's Canadian Beauty Innovation program to get warmed up for upcoming fashion week. Spend all weekend exploring the showroom and interacting with industry leaders and gurus or get dolled up and applaud the winners at the Beauty Ball awards show on Saturday night.

Maple Leafs defenceman Jake Gardiner, left, has not played since a 5-2 loss to the Penguins at the Air Canada Centre on Saturday night. BERNARD WEIL/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

After the first two games of the Maple Leafs' regular season, fans were up in arms, and at least two of those arms pulled themselves out of a blue-and-white jersey and threw it on the Air Canada Centre ice. But after the next two games — wins over the New York Rangers and Colorado Avalanche — the anger and frustration subsided. As has been true of many Toronto teams in the past, this Leafs squad is capable of dazzling and disappointing, often in the same game. This is the hallmark of a young team, which people around here can forget.

Something else to keep reminding yourself: this also will be a changing team this season. Hell, it's already changed: GM Dave Nonis picked up winger Richard Panik on waivers last week, and coach Randy Carlyle's early treatment of defenceman Jake Gardiner (benching him for the past two games) suggests a relationship that will end soon when one or the other moves on. And goalie James Reimer, whom many suspected already would've been dealt by now, stepped in admirably for struggling Jonathan Bernier. It's not what was envisioned, but from an organizational perspective, I think there's an expectancy within the organization that some punches are coming Toronto's way, and they're going to have to roll with them.

As evidenced by the fact the Leafs were outshot in their first three games before breaking that streak against the Avalanche Tuesday, puck possession likely will be a season-long challenge for them and they'll need either (or, more likely, both of) Bernier and Reimer to thrive if they hope to stay in the race for a playoff spot. Carlyle also has to find a way to re-assimilate Gardiner and his five-year, $20-million contract extension back into the lineup. If any or all of those things prove to be an issue, things can get ugly for Toronto quite quickly.

Could this lead to another year where Toronto is just bad enough to miss the playoffs, but just good enough to miss out on the best players in the entry draft (which will be especially tantalizing this year with superstars-in-the-making Connor McDavid and Jack Eichel)? Of course it could. This is Toronto we're talking about. But that's the challenge for Brendan Shanahan & Co. in the weeks to come: you know there'll be good and bad elements that stick out, but whom do you double down on and whom do you part ways with?

Something tells me that, between now and the start of next season, the focus of the Shanahan era in Toronto will be much clearer. As it stands, it's all up in the air. So enjoy.

PDO

PDO, which is calculated by adding a team's save percentage and shooting percentage at even strength, is one indication of a team's all-around game. Toronto's currently sits at 97.78, just the 20th-best mark in the league. By comparison, New Jersey is tops at 113.30, and Edmonton is worst at 89.03.

Lupul tweaks lower-body injury

Joffrey Lupul's status for the Maple Leafs' next game is uncertain after the winger missed practice Thursday with a lower-body injury.

Coach Randy Carlyle says Lupul tweaked the injury in Toronto's 3-2 overtime win over the Colorado Avalanche on Tuesday night.

The 31-year-old Lupul, who skated on his own before practice but did not take part in the team workout, missed time last season with foot and groin injuries.

Brandon Kozun moved up to the Leafs' second line with Daniel Winnik and Nazem Kadri.

The Maple Leafs will entertain the Detroit Red Wings on Friday night.

Loyal to the Royals

"We knew this was a great fan base and if we could put a product on the field, they would support it. Hopefully we've grown the game in this area and brought a lot of joy to peoples' lives."

Royals general manager Dayton Moore on the support the team has received in the Kansas City area. Following their four-game sweep of the Orioles in the ALCS, the Royals will host Game 1 of the World Series on Tuesday. The Giants had a chance to advance to the Fall Classic with a win over the Cardinals on Thursday night in Game 5 of the NLCS. Go to metronews.ca to see if they are World Series bound.

Points of interest

The Raptors will complete their sixth of eight pre-season games when they play the Kevin Durant-less Oklahoma City Thunder on Friday night in Wichita, Kan. Here's a look at some of the issues still facing the Raptors with the regular season fast approaching. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Photos 1, 4: Torstar News Service; photos 2, 3: The Canadian Press

1 Bigs must be better

It's early to sound the alarms, but the Raptors' starting front court — Amir Johnson and Jonas Valanciunas — hasn't been good enough for anyone's liking.

Simply put, they've been manhandled at times.

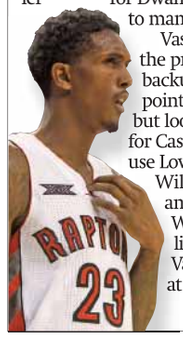
Johnson is a notoriously slow starter and Valanciunas is getting over a busy summer.

But size is an issue with the Raptors and they have to get more consistent production out of the starters.

2 Room for Lou?

One of the most effective combos late last season was when Kyle Lowry and Greivis Vasquez played together. It allowed Lowry to play off the ball and took pressure off of him to distribute.

Now with Lou Williams thrown into the mix there's another body and ball-handler for Dwane Casey to manage.



Vasquez is the primary backup point guard but look for Casey to use Lowry-Williams and even Williams-Vasquez at times.

3 Much to be D-sired

Things have improved considerably since the first two pre-season games when the Raptors appeared totally uninterested in playing hard, aggressive defence but, as Casey loves to say, they remain very much a work in progress.

Some of this has to do with the lack of rim protection and interior defence from the slow-starting bigs, but there needs to a more consistent work ethic from everyone.

4 Old faithfuls

DeMar DeRozan and Kyle Lowry are a pair the Raptors don't have to worry about.

DeRozan has tightened up his ball-handling and seems to be making better decisions in traffic and Lowry is in great shape. Having them ready allows Casey to focus on more pressing matters in the final three pre-season games.

Raonic loses while under the weather

Milos Raonic was eliminated from the Kremlin Cup by a qualifier on Thursday in Moscow.

Thornhill's Raonic, who had a bye into the second round, was eliminated by Ricardas Berankis of Lithuania 6-3, 4-6, 6-3.

The loss puts Raonic in danger of failing to qualify for the ATP Finals in London next month. He blamed the defeat on illness, saying he "was sick for the last 10 days."

Judge dismisses Jones' assault case

A judge threw out a sexual assault lawsuit filed against Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones on Thursday, saying the claims were barred by Texas law limiting the time in which a case can be filed.

Jana Weckerly had accused Jones of grabbing her genitals and forcibly kissing her in 2009. Weckerly also alleged an attorney for Jones took a memory card with photos and destroyed it, and that she was paid hush money for several years after the incident. Jones denied the allegations. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Horoscopes by Sally Brompton

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
The mood you start the day with will remain with you until the start of next week, so find something to cheer you up and get you smiling.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
It's nice to know your efforts are appreciated and Saturn in your opposite sign is about to bring you recognition. It will give your confidence a boost.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
Don't push yourself too hard physically or worry that you are not giving enough mentally or emotionally. With your ruler Mercury moving retrograde this is the ideal time to slow down.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
You may not be looking forward to a social event but the planets indicate if you make the effort to enjoy yourself you will be surprised how much fun you have. Go ahead, lighten up.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
Make an effort to get on top of your workload before the weekend begins. There is so much going on socially that it would be a shame to miss out.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
The positive results of the decisions you made a few weeks ago will be apparent over the next few days. No effort is ever wasted, so stop feeling sorry for yourself.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Saturn in the main financial area of your chart means you need to be on your guard today whenever you hear the phrase "business opportunity" or something similar.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
Today's cosmic set-up warns you cannot afford to be half involved. Friends, family and work colleagues expect total commitment and you owe it to them to give 100 per cent.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
If you push yourself beyond your natural limits today you may regret it come the start of next week. If you need to free up more time try wasting less of it on trivial pursuits.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
A partnership or relationship issue can easily be resolved today, if you are prepared to sit down and listen to the other person's grievances.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Wherever you happen to be and whatever you happen to be doing at this precise moment of time is exactly right for you, so lighten up and make it work.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
The planets warn you will have to make sacrifices in your social life today and over the weekend if you are to make progress in more serious areas.
